Speaking of that wholesome menu, the nutritious, sustainable Fijian cuisine comes courtesy of award-winning executive chef, Cory Campbell. Working with locally sourced produce, harvested from the 5.5 acre farm, Campbell concocts decadent gourmet meals, championing ‘Dock to Dish’ and farm to table. “Whilst I am driven by fresh food and my craft, my passion for Kokomo doesn’t start in the kitchen, it begins with the island community from the fisherman and farmers and then works its way into the kitchen. Sustainability is key and I’ll be looking to pave the way for the future of Kokomo by preservation,” he says.
