In the wake of the pandemic, travel restrictions were perhaps the most obvious step to curb the spread of the virus. Needless to say, the travel bug in us is waiting to pack bags, catch a flight and land in a different time zone. From the towering beauty of the Eiffel in Paris to the historical treasure trove in the mountainous alleys of Petra, the world is replete with awe-inducing wonders that have garnered their rightful attention. And yet, the world that we call our oyster holds hidden and beautiful pearls that even the most enthusiastic of travelers are yet to discover.

Here are five such destinations around the world which have much to offer to tourists, right from their breathtaking natural beauty to their perhaps unknown historical heritage.

4. Kokomo Private Island Resort, Fiji

If luxury is your middle name, the Kokomo Private Island Resort in Fiji is a must visit. The journey starts from the city of Nadi where the guests of this resort island are transported across jewel-toned blue ocean waters by a private Twin Otter seaplane or a helicopter. Comprising 26 luxury villas that also include five luxury residences, this lavish resort has everything a holiday needs. Couples can enliven their romantic quotient by relishing a cocktail in the resort's Walker d'Plank, a casual restaurant tucked behind a cove and serving Asian inspired delights. There are two more restaurants on the property.

For families, there are special nanny services while every villa has a dedicated butler. Apart from a spa, there are also yoga classes for promoting relaxation and wellness among the guests. Adventure enthusiasts can indulge in kayaking, paddleboarding, wave surfing or dive in the world-famous Astrolabe Reef known for its rich marine life. No less than a tropical reverie, this private island resort will surely be a rewarding destination post COVID-19.
