Fiji's Rise Beyond the Reef project at Navilawa Village

To celebrate International Women's Day, here's what these wonderful Fiji women are doing in their homeland.

All are leaders in their field, who each play a vital part in making Fiji one of the happiest countries on earth.

Despite the lack of tourism over the challenging COVID period, all these women are dedicated to their roles, to educate, support and inspire those who visit these magical islands.

Caroline Oakley - Head Chef at Kokomo Private Island

Caroline Oakley-Kokomo Private Island

Cooking up creative cuisines is nothing new for Caroline, the Head Chef at Kokomo Private Island.

She is currently driving Fiji's Dock to Dish movement, an initiative which supports local fishermen from the region of Kadavu to create her culinary masterpieces. Caroline continues this innovation in how she utilises the island's 2 hectare farm with a sustainable approach to F&B, ensuring that everything on her unique menu is 100% made and grown from Kokomo Island.

Hidden Gem: "Australians need to check out the Great Astrolabe Reef upon which our island sits. It is full of underwater hues of pinks, oranges, yellows and purples and frequently visited by our friendly Manta Rays."
